DIOCESAN MAGAZINE.

We have received the Diocesan Magazine for the quarter, and feel compelled to notice the opening paragraph under the heading "Personal."

It is there stated that "The truth of a statement that appeared in our 'Diocesan News' in our last issue having been denied by the PACIFIC COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER, it is necessary to state," etc.

There appears to be a little apprehension here on the part of the writer of the above paragraph. The statement in question was to the effect that a certain clergyman of this diocese had placed his resignation in the hands of the Secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. The denial of the truthfulness of the statement was made by the clergyman and the Secretary in question themselves, and not by the P. C. ADVERTISER.

The following extract is commended to the attention of the Board of Health. It occurs in article headed "What is Electro-Homoeopathy?" and runs as follows: "With the daily spectacle before our eyes of young and old borne along in an indiscriminate stream to the bourn of incurable disease beneath the cliffs of Molokai, with the constant terror haunting the families of foreigners and natives alike that some one of its members, on the account of the muscular contraction of a finger or some parasitic skin-disease will be pronounced 'incurable,' and be hurried by the police on board the Mokoli or Kilauea Hou at a moment's notice, what boon to be found on earth can be compared," etc. Of the merits of "Electro-Homoeopathy" we humbly abstain from offering an opinion.

There are other articles in the Magazine which we might remark upon were it worth while, but we pass on to a funny little bit of etymology, which makes the word Lam-mas a contraction of "Sanctus Petrus ad vincula" mas. Professor Skeat merely gives the Anglo-Saxon "hlaf-masse" or "loaf-mass," because a loaf as a first fruits of harvest was offered on that day, viz., 1st August.

LATE CHINESE NEWS.

By the Yamashiro Maru we received a file of Hongkong papers which do not however present many points of interest. The Manda Chamber of Commerce asks the inclusion of the Philippines in the treaty with the United States in order to avoid the ruin of the export of tobacco and hemp which represents $9,000,000. The Government has promised to give its attention to the matter.

A Peking correspondent says that the delay in the selection of a Minister of the United States to China is very welcome to the friends of the present Minister, Colonel Denby, as having the effect of prolonging the tenure of office of a gentleman very popular and highly esteemed by foreign residents in China as well as amongst the Chinese officials.

The Hongkong police are at work breaking up gambling houses, the Police Magistrate one morning fined nineteen men—the keepers of the houses $25 or one month hard labor and the players $5 or fourteen days.

A Japanese paper collected and forwarded to Turkey the sum of 18,907 francs for the benefit of the families of the men who lost their lives in the wreck of the Turkish frigate Ertozroul. The Sultan in acknowledgement sending as a present to the Emperor of Japan some magnificent horses.

Seventeen of the Namoo pirates have now been executed. Four were beheaded at Kowloon quite lately and thirteen were executed in April. The Hongkong daily press says: "The Chinese authorities have proved themselves very much in earnest in their pursuit of the miscreants and are deserving of all praise."

"There is no reason to doubt that all the men executed were really participants in the piracy."

The tea season at Hangchow is reported to be very brisk, and the rice merchants are enjoying an exceptionally fine season. "In Wuhu along the wharves as far as the eye can see are stored and heaped up bags of rice, while thousands upon thousands of bags are pouring in from the country. Rice being plentiful must necessarily be cheap, and rich and poor are alike happy."

The Governor of Hongkong, Sir G. W. Des Vaux, has resigned on account of ill-health.

The new steamer Empress of Japan left Hongkong for Shanghai, Yokohama and Vancouver on the 2d inst., and the Empress of China is advertised for the 28th July; these with the Empress of India make the new line in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

EXPLORATION OF GREENLAND.

Lieutenant Robert Peary of the United States navy, with the assistance of the Philadelphia Academy of Sciences, the American Geographical Society and the National Academy of Sciences, proposes to explore a part of the world which, so far as is known, has never been trodden by the foot of man—namely, the north end of Greenland. Twice within a few years Southern Greenland has been crossed by daring travelers, who marched on foot from a point near Cape Hildebrandt, on the east coast, to the neighborhood of Frederiksbaad, on the west. They reported a sea of ice of unknown depth, which covered the face of the land and never melted. Except as records of human endurance their journeys were unfruitful of result. Southern Greenland has often been circumnavigated, and exploration of the interior added nothing to the knowledge which had been acquired by observations from the decks of ships.

But the northern point of the island, or peninsula, or whatever it may be, is an untraveled mystery. From Cape Bismarck, on the east coast, to Cape Lincoln, in 83 deg. 24 min., in the Arctic Sea, no map marks a definite coast line. Rows of dots indicate an unexplored region. Greenland may be an island with north boundary about the eighty-third parallel. It may be a peninsula jutting out from Siberia and embracing Franz Josef land as one of its promontories. Or it may be an Arctic continent spreading up to and beyond the Pole. Nothing but actual observation can determine the question. To contribute his share to the extension of geographical knowledge on this subject Lieutenant Peary proposes to take passage on board a Dundee whaler that will land him at Whale Sound, a few miles south of the spot which was reached by Lockwood and Brainard of the Greeley party, and to which they gave the name of Cape Lincoln. There he will winter and accumulate such stores as he may find against his long tramp into the unknown world. Early in the spring of 1892 he will start on foot, drawing a sledge after him, along the north coast of Greenland. He says himself that he does not know how or when he will return. If Greenland turns out to be an island with a north coast running along the line of 83 deg. or thereabouts, and an east coast running along the line of 20th deg. of longitude, he may find his way to some settlement in King Williams Land. But it is more likely that when he has determined the north coast line for a certain distance he will return to his base of operations.

He will have the glory of being the only man who ever willingly undertook a journey in the latitude of 83 deg. north. Dr. Kane, and many others since his day, reached the 80th deg. The north coast of Spitzbergen and the south coast of Franz Josef Land are in that meridian. The north beach of Grant Land crosses the line of 82 deg. Lockwood and Brainard just touched 83 deg. But that has been the extreme limit of Polar exploration. It evidently may fall to the lot of Lieutenant Peary to get nearer to the North Pole than any of his predecessors in Arctic adventure.

The importance of geographical exploration in Greenland arises from the fact that some men of science regard it as the last remaining vestige of the ice age. At a short distance from the shore it is one vast unbroken mass of ice, in places, according to Lieutenant Peary, a mile thick. This ice is covered in winter and spring with a coating of snow. In summer the snow melts and forms lakes, or, where the conformation of the ground favors, streams, which flow down into the bays and assist in launching icebergs. It presents the appearance which the northern countries of the world must have presented during the last great ice drift. As the coast is reached the climate grows milder and patches of soil are exposed, on which a few vegetables are raised, and as the coast line is undergoing a process of depression—some places which were once inhabited having already sunk below the surface of the sea—the theory has been started that the whole country will some day be submerged, and so pass out of the ice age. This and other problems it will be the privilege of Lieutenant Peary to help determine. The civilized world will wish him good fortune on his daring voyage. —(Call.)

Plantation Labor Arrived.

The Japanese steamship Yamashiro Maru, C. Young, Commander, arrived Thursday morning, June 18th, about fourteen days from Yokohama, having left that port at 4 A. M., June 5th. The captain says that he had splendid weather the entire trip. The physicians attending the labor immigrants report a clean bill of health.

The Yamashiro brought 1,099 Japanese immigrants and one stow-away, making the total number of laborers 1,100, including 285 women. The immigrants have all been landed at the Quarantine Depot, Mr. Wray Taylor, the Secretary of the Board of Immigration, having charge of their embarkation.

A Worthy Object.

Since the Y. M. C. A. has given up Queen Emma Hall, the Hawaiian Board has been negotiating for a lease of the premises. The intention is to continue the use of the building and the grounds for general charitable work. It is hoped to secure the necessary fund outside of the regular donations to the Board. Any contributions for this special object may be sent to the Treasurer, W. W. Hall.

More Coffee in Puna.

Mr. E. A. Lyman will soon commence operations in Puna District for planting coffee. He has purchased three large tracts of land at East Cape, Hawaii, comprising the finest coffee land in that district. A few acres were already planted when Mr. Lyman made his purchase. A new road will be opened up from there to lead to the volcano road.

PERSONAL.

Bishop Fowler says that in case of trouble China could land 5,000,000 armed men in San Francisco easier than the United States could land half a million in China. The Bishop believes that with sufficient funds he could Christianize China in fifty years.

C. P. Huntington favors a combination of railroads. "If some unification of the railroads were effected," he says, "stockholders would get a fair return on their money, even with rates as low as they are now. Something must be done or all the roads will eventually be forced into bankruptcy."

Mr. Barnum was a business man first, last and all the time, and he appreciated the advantage of taking time by the forelock. For instance, he had a bronze statue of himself made which was artistically perfect and life-like enough to suit his own taste and satisfy his judgment of what a statue should be to do justice to its subject. This will now be his monument.

General Butler is a busy man. He has a big law practice, supplies the country with its bunting, his compiling his memoirs, engineering to have Judge Carpenter stripped of his robe, and wondering whether a Democratic nomination for the Presidency will ever strike him again. And yet he has enough spare time to show that he is a good florist, and to grow his own button-hole bouquets, which are always of better quality than anybody else wears.
